Post-War Program

THE AIR ADJUTANT GENERAL

BY COL. H. G. CULTON, USAF

Air Adjutant General, U. S. Air Force

CONTRARY to the probable prevailing assumption, the Air Adjutant General's role in the USAF, Department of the Air Force, will differ from those of his counterparts in the Department of the Army and the Adjutant General of the defunct War Department. The major difference in his role and that of his counterparts lies in the absence of staff responsibility for the administration of military personnel. Those responsibilities which include assignments and transfers, promotions, awards and decorations, career control, etc., will be administered by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel and Administration.

The role of the Air Adjutant General will nevertheless continue to be an important one. His assigned responsibilities include both staff and operating functions which, although wholly administrative in scope, are essential to the functioning of the Department and the far-flung activities of the United States Air Force. In administering these responsibilities and functions the Air Adjutant General reports directly to the Assistant Vice Chief of Staff. His staff functions include:

The review, authentication and publication of all orders, regulations, and other publications issued by the Department of the Air Force;

The formulation of policies governing the use of the United States Postal Service by USAF activities and supervision of the activities of USAF postal officers;

The standardization of USAF forms;

The formulation of printing and binding policies;

The conduct of the Records Administration Program of the Department of the Air Force and the United States Air Force.

His operating functions include:

Maintenance of the basic military personnel (201) files for all USAF military personnel including the conduct of correspondence pertaining to the files.

Preparation of the USAF officers' register.

Operation of the Message and Cable, Personnel Locator and Courier services for Headquarters USAF.

Processing of all incoming and outgoing mail and correspondence at Headquarters USAF.

Maintaining the office of record at Headquarters USAF for classified material, registered documents, all correspondence.

Army Colonels' Board To Wait 'Til December

The Army board for the selection of officers for promotion to the permanent grade of colonel in the Regular Army will not meet as soon as originally planned.

The membership of the board will probably be announced next week and under the present schedule it will convene late this month or early in December.

At that time the work of the board which convened 9 Oct. and is currently considering the selection of officers for promotion to the grades of major general and brigadier general will be over or nearly so. The fact that all of the selection boards will make use of the same secretariat is the principal reason for the effort to avoid overlapping of their meeting dates.

This week a number of branch chiefs were called upon to sit with the selection board. The Officer Personnel Act of 1947 provides:

"Officers shall be recommended to fill the office of chief of a branch, arm, or service, or the office of an assistant chief of a branch, arm, or service, as follows: The Secretary of War shall appoint a board of five general officers which shall include the then incumbent, if any, of the office to be filled and at least two other officers, if available, of a rank above that of the position for which selections are to be made who have had actual and extended service in the branch concerned."

No posts as chiefs of branches are to be filled but several posts as assistants are open.

The next board to convene, that for the selection of colonels, will consider all permanent lieutenant colonels of the Army promotion list who will complete 25 years' commissioned service for promotion on or before 31 Dec. 1947. This will include Col. (Lt. Col.) James H. Dickie 015026 and all permanent lieutenant colonels senior to him.

Also to be considered by the same board are all officers of the Army promotion list who served as temporary general officers and who will complete 18 years' commissioned service for promotion purposes on or before 31 Dec. 1947. This will include Maj. Gen. (Maj.) James M. Gavin 017676 and all officers senior to him who have served in the temporary grade of general officer.

Adm. Bledsoe Visits

Rear Adm. A. M. Bledsoe, Commander U. S. Support Group, NAVFE, arrived in Otaru, Hokkaido, on the USS Duluth recently, to visit the 11th Airborne Division, The Duluth, commanded by Capt. E. P. Hylant, recently replaced the Toledo as Admiral Bledsoe's flagship.

Special trains were provided to bring the Duluth sailors to Sapporo and Camp Crawford to spend their three day stay as guests of the Division Headquarters and the 187th Glider Infantry.

Adm. Low to Tokyo

Vice Adm. Francis S. Low, Commander Service Forces Pacific, is scheduled to arrive in Tokyo 2 Nov., to confer with Navy officials there regarding transportation and supply.

Gen. Vandegrift to Retire

General A. A. Vandegrift, first Marine Corps officer to attain the rank of General while on active duty, has announced that he is requesting retirement upon the expiration of his present tour of duty as Commandant which ends 1 Jan. 1948.

Eighteenth Commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps, General Vandegrift was born 13 March, 1887, at Charlottesville, Va., attended the University of Virginia, and was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps on 22 Jan. 1909.

Following a tour of duty in the States, he went to foreign shore duty in the

Combat Infantry Pay

Because there has been considerable misunderstanding concerning the eligibility of certain enlisted men to draw the additional pay for the Combat or Expert Infantryman Badge, Headquarters, Army Ground Forces, has issued the following directive:

"Numerous communications have been received by this Headquarters concerning transfers to Infantry in order to establish eligibility for additional pay for the Combat or Expert Infantryman Badge. Information is furnished herewith concerning the reestablishment of Infantry as the branch of the following categories of individuals who have been awarded one of the above badges and who currently occupy positions within a bulk allotment unit or activity:

a. Those who have reenlisted for an arm or service other than Infantry, or whose branch (by virtue of their latest assignment to a unit) is other than Infantry.

b. Those who have reenlisted for Regular Army Unassigned, and whose last assignment in their next previous enlistment was to other than an Infantry unit or organization. Individuals who have reenlisted for Regular Army Unassigned are held, for this purpose, to have continued as their branch the branch of the unit or organization to which last assigned in their next previous enlistment.

"Infantry may be reestablished as the branch of the individuals mentioned above, by one of the commanders listed in paragraph 2 or 3b(1), AR 615-200, as amended by Section I, Circular 316, War Department, 1946. This may be accomplished either by their physical transfer to an Infantry unit or organization, or, provided the requirement of paragraph 3, Section I, Circular 110, War Department, 1947, is met, by the issuance of an order transferring them to Infantry. (See paragraph 6, below, for a suggested paragraph of a Special Order.)

"This Headquarters does not consider it appropriate at this time to place a branch designation up a unit or activity organized under a Table of Distribution.

"Attention is particularly invited to paragraph 3, Section 1, Circular 110, War Department, 1947. The assignment of an individual holding a Combat or Expert Infantryman Badge to a position within a bulk allotment which requires or can be filled by an Infantryman is a prerequisite to the reestablishment of Infantry as his basic branch by the administrative action mentioned above.

"Following is a suggested paragraph of a Special Order to effect transfer to Infantry:

occupies a position which requires or can be filled by an Infantryman is transferred from his basic arm (service) FA to Infantry, at his own request, in accordance with Section V, War Department Circular 16, 1947, Authority: AR 615-200 as amended and Section I, War Department Circular 110, 1947."

President Seeks More Uniform Service Dress

President Truman, in a letter to Secretary of Defense Forrestal, has expressed dissatisfaction with the dress uniforms of officers of the Armed Services attending state and other functions at home and abroad, and has instructed the Secretary of Defense to initiate within the Services a study of the evening dress uniform with the aim in view of devising an approved design with more uniformity between the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps officers in their evening dress.

Secretary of Defense Forrestal immediately ordered a joint study of the matter and at the same time authorized the wearing of the evening dress uniform by members of the Armed Services on appropriate occasion. Its wear had been halted during the war.

Following is the announcement made by the Office of the Secretary of Defense:

"Acting on instructions from the President, Secretary of Defense Forrestal has directed the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to initiate a joint study with a view to authorizing an appropriate evening dress uniform for the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

"At the same time the Secretary authorized officers now possessing evening dress uniforms to wear them at state functions both at home and abroad, when officers of other nations may be present in evening dress uniform, and on other occasions when appropriate.

"Secretary Forrestal emphasized that the authorization to wear dress uniforms imposes no obligation on any officer to incur additional expense for uniforms at this time."

A joint board, made up of high-ranking officers of the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps is currently studying the question.

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Vice Chief of Staff of the USAF, is the Air representative and senior member of the board. Vice Adm. William M. Fechteler, USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Personnel, represents the Navy. Army member is Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, USA, Assistant Chief G-1, Army Ground Forces. Brig. Gen. Ray A. Robinson, USMC, represents the Marine Corps.

Among other representatives to the board are Brig. Gen. L. P. Whitten, USAF, and Col. H. K. Whalen, USA, Personnel and Administration Division, Department of the Army General Staff.

This initial study is probably the forerunner of subsequent studies of the ordinary dress uniform and even of the service uniform of the Services which may result in a greater degree of standardization.

The blue evening dress uniform of the Army, which would also be now in the possession of many officers of the Air Force, and which has been authorized for wear in the directive issued by Secretary Forrestal, includes the tail coat, similar in cut to civilian full dress. It is worn with white vest, dress shirt, wing collar and black bow tie. Plain gold studs and cuff buttons are worn. The blue dress cap is worn with evening dress and wear of

Navy Day

New York World Telegram—"This is Navy Day. It's an occasion for grateful tribute to the men, living and dead, who won histories' greatest Naval War. It's an occasion, too, for pledging continued support to a strong, active United States Navy."

Philadelphia Inquirer—"For the real security of the United States it must build up its fighting services, active and reserve, with thoroughly trained men, and enough of them to deter any aggressor."

New York Herald-Tribune—"In the new framework of the coordinated defense system the Navy is doing its part. Navy Day is a reminder to the nation that the nation must do its part as well."

Baltimore News Post—"The glory of the past is not sufficient armor for the present. Unless we man the fleet with trained personnel, we will be in effect torpedoing our own Navy with neglect again as we have in the past."

New York Sun—"For the first time Navy Day is observed with the United States Navy as one component part of our unified armed forces. This organic change will not affect American pride in the historic past of the Navy, and in particular its great achievements in the recent war, or American confidence in the Navy of the present and the future as one of the arms of defense."

New York Times—"The pre-eminent position we hold on the seven seas entails a responsibility this country never has had before. It was said of the British Navy during the nineteenth century that it was the greatest force for peace and order in the world. As much could now be said of the United States Navy."

House Committee Reports on Visit to Europe and Near East

Giving high praise to the conduct and morale of the U. S. Forces in Europe and the Near East, Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.), chairman of a subcommittee which just returned from an inspection trip abroad, formally reported this week that "it would be supreme folly for our nation to reduce its Armed Forces at this critical moment in world history."

The full text of the report submitted by Representative Short to Representative Andrews (R-NY), chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services, follows:

Text of Report

"Your Subcommittee has just completed a tour of twelve European and Near East countries, including Germany; Austria; the free territory of Trieste; Greece; Turkey; Iran; Saudi Arabia; Egypt; Italy; Switzerland; France; and England. During this tour the Committee met and discussed military, economic, political, and social conditions with literally hundreds of persons. We met with Army, Navy, Air, and State Department officials in Berlin, Frankfurt, Munich, Vienna, Trieste, Athens, Istanbul, Teheran, Dhara, Cairo, Rome, Paris, Geneva, and London. The Committee was favorably impressed by the cooperation and coordination between the officials of the Army, Navy, Air, and State Departments. In addition your Committee met with both civil and military authorities of the different governments visited."

"While the main mission of our tour was to inspect American military installations and American troops in the occupied zones of Germany and Austria, nevertheless, because our overseas military missions are largely determined by social, economic, and political conditions abroad, your subcommittee spent considerable time investigating those conditions. Your Subcommittee is pleased to report that it found the morale of our troops to be exceptionally high. The leadership displayed by our officers and non-commissioned officers was outstanding. The health of our troops in general is excellent. The discipline is of the highest quality and hundreds of G. I.'s were personally interviewed, minor complaints were received, some of which were found to be justified, and remedial steps were immediately taken by local commanders."

"Facilities and installations inspected were found to be in excellent condition. A number of U. S. cemeteries visited, revealed that these were being given every care and attention."

"While the number of American troops in Europe today represents merely a token force whose mission is that of maintaining law and order and supporting the military government in the occupied zones, nevertheless, the mere presence of American troops very obviously has done much to reassure the peoples of the occupied zones that the United States is vitally concerned with their welfare and their problems."

Germany's Needs

"In Germany, your Subcommittee observed that food and coal were the two basic needs. Much can be done to improve the economic conditions within Germany. The people of Germany are on a ration of 1,550 calorie units per day, which is barely above the subsistence level. Even before the war Germany was able only to produce 70% of her food, and today Poland possesses 25% of the area that was previously available for food production. Added to that is the fact that Western Europe has suffered the worst drought in 100 years, which together with the lack of sufficient fertilizer and farm equipment, has made the situation even more acute. With the low potential food availability and the low diet now existing, it is very obvious that the food supply must be augmented from other sources if the people of Germany are to be able to contribute to Europe's economic recovery. The coal supply has been another serious problem for Germany and surrounding countries. Coal is essential for industrial production and heating purposes. The coal production at the present time is far below the pre-war level, in spite of the fact that every effort is being made to increase this production in the Ruhr area. The low food allowance for miners, and labor troubles largely account for the disappointing coal production."

"In addition to the major problems of food and coal in Germany, there is an acute housing shortage brought about by the widespread devastation wrought by allied bombings."

"In addition to these economic problems, the ever-present threat of Communism continues to be a major barrier to Germany's rehabilitation. It is the opinion of the Subcommittee that the German people do not want Communism, but unless economic conditions are improved, their will to resist Communism will be greatly weakened."

"Communism thrives on chaos, misery, hunger, and discontent."

Austrian Occupation

"From Germany, your Subcommittee proceeded to Vienna, Austria. The purpose of an Austrian occupation is to restore Austria to an independent and economically sound country. Austria is the gateway to South-eastern Europe. It is the opinion of your Subcommittee that Austria must be maintained as a single economic unit. To that end it is essential that every effort be made to assure Austria's political and economic independence. In any plan to rehabilitate Europe, Austria must definitely be considered."

"At present, Communism has made but slight headway in the freely elected Austrian Federal government. Our efforts should be directed toward preserving the gains Austria has made and to assist her in every way possible in maintaining a government of her own free choice."

"In Trieste, your Subcommittee was immediately impressed with the tension that prevails in this area. A large Yugoslavian Army is stationed practically at Trieste's door. While the situation there is at present under control, there can be no doubt that this area may well be a powder keg. It demands the most careful observation by the United States, and the present policy of standing firm on previous agreements and treaties should be maintained."

"In Iran, your Subcommittee found a determination by this small nation to keep itself free from foreign domination. She should receive the support of the United Nations in this endeavor."

"In Saudi Arabia the Subcommittee was privileged to witness the benefits of free enterprise. The Arabian-American Oil Company has done a magnificent job in exploring and developing the vast oil reserves that underlie this area, for the mutual benefit of Saudi Arabia and the rest of the world. The success of their venture is of vital importance to the United States. The committee was pleased to find that the most friendly relations existed between Saudi Arabia and the representatives of the Arabian-American Oil Company."

Egypt and Italy

"Your Subcommittee arrived in Egypt at about the time of the outbreak of the cholera epidemic and observed with great satisfaction the important part that American doctors and American vaccines are doing to combat this dread disease. It is important from the standpoint of our international relations that every effort be made to promote good will between the United States and the Egyptian government."

"The Committee next proceeded to Italy. The present Italian government and the Italian people show a determination to rehabilitate Italy. Many problems confront Italy, inasmuch as Italy's economy depends largely upon imports of food and raw materials."

"Your Subcommittee conferred with many officials of the Italian government and can report with confidence that they are putting forth their best efforts to establish a stable government based on a sound economy. An audience with His Holiness, Pope Pius XII, confirmed this observation."

"We observed with satisfaction that the Italian government and the people were highly elated with the position taken by the United States in not accepting the warships allocated to the United States by the terms of the Italian peace treaty."

"Unfortunately, Communism has made rather sizable inroads in Italy, but if well directed assistance is continued for a reasonable period of time, Italy shows every promise of preventing the spread of Communism."

"Our brief stay in Switzerland convinced the Committee that Communism will find it most difficult ever to gain a foothold in this small but highly individualistic, enlightened and progressive country."

"From a happy Switzerland your Committee proceeded to a sad France. Here the burdens of German occupation, the internal division and strife among her own people, coupled with the fear of Russian domination, has produced a paralyzing effect upon her economic recovery and political stability. However, the Committee feels that France will, with proper aid, re-establish herself as one of the great nations of Europe."

England

"England was the last nation to be visited by your Subcommittee. Here we observed an indomitable will and dogged determination to re-establish England's economy that augurs well for the whole of Europe. Notwithstanding the terrible sacrifices of war and the tremendous losses of men and money as well as the liquidation of most of her foreign investments, England with characteristic tenacity and vigor is putting forth every effort to maintain herself as one of the world's great powers. In spite of the nationalization of certain of her industries, the spirit of individualism is still strong in England."

"England has reduced her armed forces and adopted an austerity program at home. We believe that austerity is no adequate substitute for production. Increased production in England and other countries is the key to recovery and world peace."

"Your Subcommittee is of the opinion that continued aid should be immediately furnished Europe as suggested in this report, not only from a humanitarian and philanthropic point of view, but also because it is essential for our own peace and prosperity. Long-term aid should be conditioned upon maximum self-help from the countries who have indicated a desire to participate in this program. Such aid should be granted on a business-like basis and there should be assurances of careful administration."

"However, we cannot place too much emphasis upon the fact that American resources are not inexhaustible. Our nation, like other belligerents, suffered heavily in these two world wars. We have many problems of our own and heavy burdens to carry. The help that we can give is limited and our willingness to continue to help others must not be construed to mean that United States can assume the sole responsibility for feeding and clothing the rest of the world. There must be a dollar's worth of results for every dollar granted."

"In conclusion, it is obvious to the Committee that unstable conditions throughout the world make it imperative that the United States be strong on land, sea, and air. It would be supreme folly for our nation to reduce its armed forces at this critical moment in world history."

"DEWEY SHORT, M. C.
"CHAIRMAN."

Membership

The Committee included the following persons: Chairman, Short; Representative Ladda-Sussner, (D-Md.), Representative George Bates, (R-Mass.), Representative John Fogarty, (D-R. I.), Representative Gordon Canfield, (R-N. J.), Representative Margaret Chase Smith, (R-Maine), Representative Leroy Johnson, (R-Calif.), Representative C. W. (Runt) Bishop, (R-Ill.), and Representative Leon Gavlin, (R-Pa.).

Accompanying the Committee were: Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, Surgeon General, U. S. Navy; Brig. Gen. Ralph Stearley, USAF; Col. Charles MacDonald, USAF; John R. Blandford, Professional Staff Member, Armed Services Committee; Robert E. Ward, State Department Representative; Maj. Luke Quinn, USA; and Wilfred Pelletier, Secretary.

Gen. Bradley Honored

The Theodore Roosevelt Distinguished Service Medal for 1947 was presented to General Omar N. Bradley, USA, 27 Oct. at a dinner in New York City sponsored by the Roosevelt Memorial Association and the Women's Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Association.

General Bradley was cited both for his war-time achievements as Commander of the First U. S. Army and as head of the Veterans Administration which the citation pointed out now "deals successfully with upward of 15,000,000 veterans when, before him, it dealt incompetently with 5,000,000."

Urge Lighter-Than-Air

A plea for the development of lighter-than-aircraft, particularly as "electronic sentinels" in outlying areas, and a forecast of the loss of personal contact and greater emphasis on instrumentation in future warfare, featured this week's meetings of the President's Air Policy Commission in Washington.

Discussing lighter-than-aircraft was Rear Adm. C. E. Rosendahl, USN-Ret., while Rear Adm. Luis de Florez, USN-Ret., discussed future warfare.

Admiral Florez asserted that protection against long-range attacks by an unseen enemy "will lie in rapid detection and countermeasures directed from centers which can avoid or withstand the destruction of the first onslaught. To keep pace with enemy weapons, our weapons and equipment for countermeasures will grow to such complexity and to such a level or remoteness in personal contact that detection and operations can only be effected through instrumentation."

Admiral Rosendahl, who headed the lighter-than-air division of the Naval Air Forces preceding his retirement from active duty, indicated "in general terms" the uses which he said he could foresee for military-naval rigid airships. "I use the term 'military-naval' in a broad sense," said the witness, "since clarification of functions under the new National Defense set-up conceivably might lodge airships elsewhere than in the Navy."

Admiral Rosendahl then specified as such uses the big airship's long cruising range together with its high useful load capacity and abundant interior volume and space to permit generous installation of modern electronics and other new devices that will be mandatory in coming warfare, as well as comfortable accommodations for personnel in sufficient numbers to provide adequate reliefs for continuous, efficient operation.

Referring to current discussion of "defensive air patrols" as "a war preventive measure," Admiral Rosendahl said: "I seriously commend to those responsible for that element of our protection, a sincere comprehensive study of the rigid airship as one of the types that can best do this important job. Deployed far at sea, or in other vital regions such as the Arctic, these airship 'electronics sentinels' could serve not only as detectors and relayers of vital information, but through use of robots and other devices readily adaptable to carriage and use by large airships, they could undoubtedly be developed also into interceptors and deflectors of some forms of expected enemy effort."

Minority Groups in Services

Recommendations for legislation forbidding the Armed Services to discriminate or segregate any minority group and for the prohibition of any discrimination against members of the services by the public were included in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights this week. The committee urged:

"The enactment by Congress of legislation, followed by appropriate administrative action, to end immediately all discrimination and segregation based on race, color, creed, or national origin, in the organization and activities of all branches of the armed services."

"The enactment by Congress of legislation providing that no member of the armed forces shall be subject to discrimination of any kind by any public authority or place of public accommodation, recreation, transportation, or other public service or business."

Air Inspection System Revised

There will be no authorization for officers of the Inspector General's Department in the United States Air Force after 30 Nov. 1947. The commanding generals of all major Air Commands in the Zone of the Interior and the commanding generals of the Alaskan Air Command, Caribbean Air Command, Far East Air Forces, Seventh Air Force, and U. S. Air Forces in Europe have been so informed by letter from USAF Headquarters.

Air Force Regulation 35-12 provides that all officers assigned to air inspection on the staff of major air commands, numbered air forces, and comparable headquarters will be detailed by orders issued by the Department of the Air Force. The regulation also sets minimum qualifications required. Following is the text of AF Regulation 35-12:

1. Effective 1 Dec. 1947, all officers assigned to air inspection duty at this Headquarters, on the staff of the major air commands, numbered air forces, and comparable commands will be designated "air inspectors" and will be obtained by detail of officers of the United States Air Force or on duty therewith. Air inspectors will be detailed by orders issued by the Department of the Air Force for assignment to air inspection duties at the headquarters of a specific command, numbered air force, or comparable command as recommended by commanders upon whose staff they are to serve.

2. Upon relief from assignment to such duties at that headquarters they will be relieved from detail by orders issued by the Department of the Air Force. All requests for detail or relief from detail will be submitted through command channels to this Headquarters (Attention: The Air Inspector).

3. The normal tour of duty in the Air Inspection System will be three years.

4. The senior air inspector of the headquarters of a major air command, numbered air force, or comparable command will be designated the air inspector thereof (e.g., the Air Inspector, Fourth Air Force, etc.). The following minimum qualifications are required for such officers:

a. Major Air Command:

(1) Ten years of active commissioned service.

(2) Active heavier-than-air pilot where flying is the principal mission.

(3) Rank of colonel or above.

(4) Regular, or of a category not normally subject to separation within a year.

(5) Expressed desire of the officer for the detail.

b. Numbered Air Force or Comparable Command:

(1) Seven years of active commissioned service.

(2) Active heavier-than-air pilot where flying is the principal mission.

(3) Rank of colonel.

(4) Regular, or of a category not normally subject to separation within a year.

(5) Expressed desire of the officer for the detail.

5. The following minimum qualifications are required for detail as an air inspector:

a. Five years of active commissioned service.

b. Rank of captain or above.

c. Regular, or of a category not normally subject to separation within a year.

d. Expressed desire of the officer for the detail.

6. Organization Inspectors. Personnel assigned to inspection duties at echelons lower than a numbered air force or comparable command will be designated as wing, base, etc., inspectors. These organization inspectors will be selected from those officers who desire such assignments and who have demonstrated that they have better than average ability and initiative. The senior inspector of an organization which has a primary mission of flying will be an active heavier-than-air pilot. Organization inspectors will be assigned on orders of their respective commanders.

7. Assistant Air Inspectors and Assistant Organization Inspectors. Warrant officers and enlisted personnel will be designated as assistant air inspectors when assigned to duty with an air inspector, and will be designated as an assistant organization inspector (wing, base, etc.) when assigned to duty with an organization inspector. Such assignments will

W. STUART SYMINGTON

The Secretary of the Air Force

AFFABLE, charming, brilliant, liberal, successful, dynamic—all these adjectives have been applied to William Stuart Symington 3d, the last Assistant Secretary of War for Air and the first Secretary of the Air Force.

Such adulatory words are used with considerable glibness and frequency around Washington, but they rarely fit their subject as aptly as they fit "Stu" Symington. He is a big man (over six feet tall, weighs 190 pounds), with a big reputation (particularly for his skill in rehabilitating small businesses), and he has that easy combination of manners and social graces known as "presence." He also has a problem.

That problem is to get the U. S. Air Force well started in the right direction as an autonomous and coordinate branch of the military establishment. In view of his career as an industrialist, it is hardly surprising that he seeks solution of his problem in the methods of successful business administration. To oversimplify, he sees his task as one of making certain that such dollars as the Air Force may get in appropriations are stretched to their ultimate limit.

"We are going to do what we can," Mr. Symington says, "to get the most of the best for the least—to assure the taxpayer a maximum return on his defense tax dollar."

"We are rapidly putting in 'management control through cost control' to operate as closely as possible to modern American business methods."

That accent on business methods has become quite emphatic in the capital in the last two years. Mr. Symington is one of the more notable recruits to policymaking levels of the government in a transition which has seen the social planners and the lawyers being replaced by bankers, business men and industrialists.

Mr. Symington was born to wealth, but paradoxically could be described as a "self-made man." He got fired twice from family companies, but did exceedingly well in his own ventures outside the family industrial fold.

When he left Yale in 1923, he entered Symington Company (now Symington-Gould), a railroad equipment plant; but he found fault with the company product, and was discharged. The family gave him another chance, at a drafting board; but the prospect did not please a young man with ideas of his own. He bought a clay products company and turned it into a successful enterprise within a short time. In 1927 he returned to the Symington interests as president of Gould Car Lighting Company and vice-president of the Gould Storage Battery Company.

"The family," he reports, "fired me again, this time because I told the president nobody on the lot knew how to make batteries."

The dismissal applied only to the battery half of his dual capacity. In 1928, however, he sold Gould Car Lighting and began to manufacture radio loudspeakers under the name of Valley Appliances, Inc. This concern was merged in 1930 with Colonial Radio Corporation and Mr.

Symington began five years as president of Colonial Radio at Rochester, N. Y.

In 1935 he was offered the job of reorganizing Rustless Iron and Steel Company, a job which took him back to Baltimore, his boyhood home. It took him two years to complete a successful reorganization, and he was "dabbling" with new inventions when, in 1938, he became interested in the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Company at St. Louis.

It was in the presidency of this company that he acquired his reputation as a liberal and forward-thinking business executive. The company was in financial difficulties and suffering from acute labor troubles. Mr. Symington straightened the financial tangle, then tackled the labor problem. To the consternation of some St. Louis business contemporaries, his solution was to work with the representative of the CIO's United Electrical and Radio Machine Workers of America, which covered Emerson. The union's organizer in St. Louis, William Sentner, also happened to be a communist.

Mr. Symington's decision to cooperate with the employees of his company through their union had a double purpose—he wanted a profitable company, and he wanted it to be a good place to work. During the course of two years, he achieved both ends. Instead of giving the union as little cooperation as possible and giving it grudgingly, he helped consolidate the organization in his own company, with the comment "If I'm going to have a union, I'm going to have a good union." He instituted a profit-sharing plan, and the employees rallied to the company's support—Mr. Symington called the result "balanced industrial democracy that works." As to the communism of the organizer, the company president believed that under the Wagner Act industry had to deal with the workers' elected representatives regardless of personal politics. As the success of his methods became apparent, the criticism in St. Louis disappeared, and Mr. Symington became a director of the Chamber of Commerce and vice-chairman of the Committee for Economic Development. During the war Emerson manufactured power-operated turrets for bombers, and was the only big war plant in St. Louis that was free of labor trouble.

His war contracts brought him frequently to Washington for conferences, and in 1941 he went to England as an observer for the Office of Production Management to study British experience in bomber turret manufacture. These wartime experiences with the government led naturally to his appointment in June 1945 as chairman of the Surplus Property Board, and eight months later he became Assistant Secretary of War for Air.

He had long been an air enthusiast, and—despite the fact his own military service was limited to a brief enlistment during the last year of the first World War, while he was still in his 'teens—he was no stranger to matters of military policy and administration. His father-in-law is Representative (formerly Senator) James W. Wadsworth of New York, a true "military expert" who directed the drafting of the National Defense Act of 1920 as Chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee; and Mr. Symington confesses he has not been immune to Mr. Wadsworth's enthusiasm.

For all his familiarity with the developments of the last 50 years in the military establishment, Mr. Symington is no traditionalist in his approach to the military problem. Thoroughly "air-minded," he speaks naturally of an Air Force in being as the United States' first line of defense—except for Intelligence. That important exception is one not often noted in the past by military officials, and is indicative of the Air Secretary's grasp of the security problem.

In the many problems accompanying the shift of the Air Force from its status as part of the Army to its new independence, Mr. Symington is inclined to follow the lead of his Chief of Staff, General Carl Spaatz, in all purely military aspects, devoting a greater part of his attention to logistics, in which presumably his industrial experience is more readily applicable. Nevertheless, the new attempt to separate staff planning from operational command, as reflected in the Air Staff organization, bears the definite imprint of Mr. Symington's ideas. Moreover, he and General Spaatz work unusually well together, giving the new Air Force a highly complimentary team at the top level.

Presenting a four-point Air Force program as essential to national security—a regular Air Force "in being" of 70 groups, strong National Guard and Reserve air organizations, an extensive and flourishing air transport industry, and a sound aircraft manufacturing industry capable of expansion—the Secretary admits the program will cost a lot of money, and "the cost is out of our hands."

"Nor," he adds, "is that essentially our problem. General Spaatz and I conceive our responsibility to report what we need in units, not necessarily in dollars."

In his new job, Mr. Symington obviously works hard, and just as obviously relies on it. It is in the pattern of his business career, perhaps, that instead of trying to chart a detailed course and stick to it with the new department, he is "feeling his way" through its many problems in search of practical and workable solutions.

Army Decoration Policy

The new Department of the Army policy for award of decorations in peacetime, restricting considerably the award of certain decorations, is published in Department of the Army Memorandum No. 600-45-2, the text of which follows:

1. The decoration system is primarily intended as recognition of war services. The liberal standards established for war services cannot be applied in peacetime without depreciating the value of decorations. For decorations purposes, war service ceased 2 March 1946.

2. In peacetime, the Distinguished Service Medal and Legion of Merit will not be awarded for performance of duty in normal assignments, but will be limited to performance of duty with marked international or national significance and under unusually complicated or frequently hazardous conditions. For such service, the Distinguished Service Medal will be reserved for the responsible head and the Legion of Merit for other key individuals whose services contribute markedly to the success of the project. Awards of the Distinguished Service Medal and the Legion of Merit will be few for services rendered entirely subsequent to 2 March 1946, which date was the termination of military operations against the armed enemy.

3. The Army Commendation Ribbon will not be awarded to general officers. It will not be awarded to field grade officers for performance of duty in normal assignments, but will be limited to performance of duty under unusually complicated or frequently hazardous conditions in connection with problems of marked international or national significance. The Army Commendation Ribbon may be awarded to junior officers and enlisted men for performing the same types of duty as indicated above for field grade officers and also for rendering distinctively unusual and outstanding services both in the United States and overseas.

4. In addition to its award for services of the type indicated in paragraph 3, the Army Commendation Ribbon may be awarded to any member of the armed forces of the United States for an act of courage which does not meet the heroism requirements of the Soldier's Medal. Decorations for an act of courage will be awarded for "meritorious achievement"; all other awards will be for "meritorious service."

5. Each headquarters receiving a recommendation for a decoration for peacetime services will insure that:

a. Recommendations describing performance of a normal duty, even though rated superior, are disapproved and returned to the originator.

b. An officer is not proposed for an award for meritorious service until the organizational assignment in which the services were rendered is terminated. Length of service alone and/or termination of assignment of the recommending officer does not justify an award.

c. The proposed award will not recognize continuation of the same or similar type services which have previously been recognized by a meritorious service award.

6. WD letter (AGPD-C 200.6 ACR (12 Apr 47)), 21 April 1947, subject, "Army Commendation Ribbon," is rescinded.

P 4 M-1 Named "Mercator"

The new Navy patrol plane, previously known by the symbols P 4 M-1, is to be named "Mercator" in honor of the sixteenth century Flemish geographer. With a 3,000 mile range the new plane, combining two jet and two gasoline engines, will have a top speed higher than 350 miles an hour. The name Mercator was selected by the Navy because of its close association with navigation.

To Release Aviators

All Naval contract aviators whose contract expires during the first six months of 1948 will be released to inactive duty prior to the end of this year, the Navy announced this week. The text of ALNAV 234 follows:

"That portion of ALNAV 181-47 which states that approximately one hundred officers will be selected for duty with air ferry squadrons one and two is cancelled. All contract aviators whose contract expires between 1 January 1948 and 30 June 1948 will be released to inactive duty prior to 31 December 1947. This does not affect reserve officers who are tentatively approved retainees until 30 June 1948."

Shipment of Autos

For the shipment of privately owned autos to the European Command, all personnel, upon arrival at the New York Port of Embarkation, will be required to sign a certificate to the effect that they will not request shipment of more than one automobile; and in the event shipment is made, the vehicle will contain no personal property in trunk or inside other than automobile accessories, tools and spare parts.

To eliminate the possibility of excessive damage to motors of automobiles, radiators will be filled with sufficient antifreeze to afford protection from freezing in a temperature of ten degrees below zero. In the event antifreeze does not afford such protection upon testing, radiator and block will be completely drained and all drain cocks will be left open.

See Amphibious Operation

Nearly 600 Army officers from the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., are traveling to Coronado, Calif., on 8 Nov., in 20 four-engine Marine Corps aircraft to receive a week of intensive instruction in amphibious operations which will be conducted by the Amphibious Force, Pacific Fleet which will use some 9,000 Naval and Marine Corps personnel, 43 combat ships, and 300 Naval aircraft for the instruction and demonstrations.

The announcement of plans for this operation was made jointly by Rear Adm. A. D. Struble, USN, Commander Amphibious Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet, and Lt. Gen. L. T. Gerow, Commandant of Command and General Staff College.

Ordnance Advisory Committee

At a recent meeting in the office of Brig. Gen. Henry B. Saylor, Chief of Ordnance's Research and Development Division, the newly formed A.S.T.M. Ordnance Advisory Committee heard, first, a welcoming talk by General Saylor, and then brief discussions by several Ordnance Scientists of the types of problems upon which they will be asked to advise the Department.

Five of the ten industrial members of the committee were present, as were also the Chairman, Mr. C. L. Warwick and Mr. Carter Cole, both of the American Society for Testing Materials.

Besides the Chairman, Mr. Warwick, the Committee is composed of the following: A. W. Carpenter, The B. F. Goodrich Co.; P. V. Faragher, Aluminum Company of America; W. H. Finkeldy, Signmaster and Breyer; Nell A. Fowler, General Box Co.; J. C. Geniesse, The Atlantic Refining Co.; J. J. Kanter, Crane Co.; N. L. Mochel, Westinghouse Electric Corp.; H. K. Nason, Monsanto Chemical Co.; and J. R. Townsend, Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Gen. Clay to Retire

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, commanding general of the European Command, stated at a Berlin press conference this week that he intends to retire but would not leave "for quite a few months," according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Department of the Army spokesmen declined to comment on the matter as the request for retirement had not yet been received.

Gen. Eisenhower in Kansas

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, concluded a three-day visit to his home state with a brief stop 26 Oct. at Abilene, Kans.

The primary purpose of General Eisenhower's visit was to present a collection of war decorations and other mementos to the Eisenhower Memorial Foundation, a group of Kansans which is raising $1,000,000 to build a shrine honoring him and other veterans of World War II.

General Eisenhower spoke before trustees of the organization and others paying tribute to the "passionate belief in democracy practiced by my mother and father."

Guests included Governor Frank Carlson, former Governor Alf M. Landon and Harry Darby of Kansas City, National Republican Committeeman. Charles M. Harger, president of the foundation and editor of the Abilene Reflector-Chronicle, said that Roy Roberts, president of the Kansas City Star, another foundation trustee, had been invited but was unable to attend because of a speaking engagement in Kansas City before a typographical union.

Speaking 25 Oct. at the Kansas State College, Manhattan, General Eisenhower said in part:

"At this critical crossroads of history, the free world depends on America to lead the way. Misunderstanding or ignorance of the nation's destiny and the citizen's responsibility in its fulfillment are definite dangers to success. Our schools foster science and the arts; they increase our productivity and give to us greater capacity to enjoy and profit from the thinkers and artists of the ages; they increase our earning power and give to us a constantly improving standard of daily life. But underlying all else, our schools must construct a foundation of understanding on which we may base wise individual and national decisions. Unless we have such understanding, our decisions will be shortcircuited by transient considerations or, at least, impaired by hesitancy and doubt."

As all things must, Army's string came to an end last Saturday. After 32 consecutive games marred only by two scoreless ties, the Cadets ran into a Columbia team that was ready, willing and able. The Lions walked off with a 21-20 decision, scoring the winning touchdown and conversion in the last few minutes of play.

It is the belief of this corner that the defeat will make Army a better football team for the rest of this year and in the immediate years to come. 32 games without a loss is a glorious monument left by some great teams, but it was also a sword of Damocles over the heads of present Cadet gridders. The games coming up will be plenty tough, and Coach Blaik and his charges are doubtless relieved to be approaching them as individual contests, without the strain of a protracted streak.

It is interesting to note that it was Columbia's passing which beat Army. From the Villanova game on, it has been apparent that pass defense has been the one glaring weakness of an otherwise fine Cadet eleven. This should not be construed as detracting one whit from Columbia's pass catching demon, Swlacki, or his mentor, Lou Little. The weakness was there, and they capitalized on it, brilliantly, which is the way to win football games. With more able seines in the secondary, however, at least one touchdown might have been averted.

Speaking of pass defense, it crops up twice again in this week's discussion. First off, it was in no small way responsible for Navy's 21-0 loss to Penn. Right-handed Evans and southpaw Minisi, a former midshipman, connected time and again, with the former hitting five times out of six tries in the final two minutes to account for Penn's last score.

The game's big break, however, came late in the third quarter, with Penn ahead 7-0 at the time. The Midshipmen had launched a sustained drive good for 37 yards and were smashing like a cyclotron. They were inspired and Annapolis adherents were remembering the strong finishes against Duke and Cornell. Then Hawkins fumbled near midfield, and the spark went from Navy to the Quakers, with Penn scoring before they lost possession of the ball.

As usual, though, the opposition knew it had been in a rugged football game.

The last mention of pass defense is with regard to Army-Notre Dame on 8 Nov. The sharp-eyed Irish scouts miss few bets, and with Johnny Lujack tossing them, the Cadet secondary is in for a busy afternoon. Both teams will be anxious to win this, their last meeting until further notice, with Notre Dame favored.

And as if Penn and the Fighting Irish on successive week-ends were not enough, 8 Nov. finds Navy colliding with Georgia Tech at Baltimore. The more we think of that Navy schedule, the more we shudder.

Today (1 Nov.) Navy plays Notre Dame at Cleveland, while Army relaxes, it hopes, against Washington and Lee at West Point.

Deputy 4th Army Commander

Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. — General Thomas T. Handy, Fourth Army Commander, has announced that Maj. Gen. Andrew D. Bruce will become Deputy Fourth Army Commander upon the departure of Maj. Gen. John B. Coulter, who has been ordered to the Far East Command in Tokyo, Japan, in January 1948.

Gen. Wedemeyer Staff Director

Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, Commanding General, Second Army, was relieved 29 Oct. to report for duty with the Office of the Chief of Staff, United States Army. Early in November, General Wedemeyer will be assigned as Director, Plans and Operations Division, Army General Staff, succeeding Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad. General Norstad has been designated as Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations, United States Air Force.

The successor to General Wedemeyer as Commanding General, Second Army, will be announced later. Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis will assume command of Second Army until a successor to General Wedemeyer is named.

"Weavers of Speech"

To you, who each day
Take on anew your tasks
Along the lines that speech will go
Through city streets or far out
Upon some mountainside
Where you have blazed a trail
And kept it clear;
To you there comes from all who use the wires
A tribute for a job well done.

For these are not just still and idle strands
That stretch across a country vast and wide—
But bearers
Of life's friendly words
And messages of high import
To people everywhere.

Not spectacular, your usual day,
Not in the headlines
Except they be of fire, or storm, or flood.
Then a grateful nation
Knows the full measure of your skill and worth.
And the fine spirit of service
Which puts truth and purpose
In this honored creed —
"The message must get through."

USNA Acts in Ticket Case

Moving immediately after an investigation into irregularities in distribution of Navy football tickets, the U. S. Naval Academy this week dismissed a member of its first class. The investigation, which followed the apprehension of a civilian leaving the Academy grounds with 400 Penn-Navy tickets in his possession, disclosed that only one midshipman was culpable in that junior classman had turned their tickets over to him in good faith.

The prompt and stern action taken by the authorities, together with assurance that only one member was involved, will go far in giving the public confidence in the integrity of the handling of Navy tickets. The official Academy statement on the case follows:

"Midshipman Frederick W. Lauer, Jr., Wilmette, Ill., Class of 1948 B was discharged from the U. S. Naval Academy and the Naval Service 23 October 1947, for an accumulation of demerits and the majority of which he had received for irregularities in the handling of tickets for the Penn-Navy game of last week-end. Careful investigation by the Naval Academy authorities indicated that Mr. Lauer was the only midshipman who stood to profit by the transaction and who was involved in major irregularities. Mr. Lauer obtained the tickets from individual midshipmen of the junior classes who turned over their applications in good faith. The midshipmen were entitled to purchase a maximum of four tickets for the Penn-Navy game if they so applied. This irregularity was disclosed when a Mr. Harry Rubin was apprehended at the main gate of the Naval Academy shortly after 8 o'clock the evening of 15 Oct. with 400 tickets in his possession. At that time Mr. Rubin on being questioned by Naval Academy Athletic Association authorities as to how he obtained these tickets, he said of his own free will, 'that a man in Philadelphia, asked me to come down to the U. S. Naval Academy to pick up a bundle from Mr. Lauer.'"

Mobile Seaplane Slip

A self-propelled floating seaplane berth, which moves out from shore to simplify the mooring of waterborne aircraft, has been developed and successfully tested by the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Built of pontoons, the new seaplane slip operates along a 600-foot submerged cable and can be swung about in any direction to permit a plane on the water to taxi into the wind while entering or leaving the slip. As a result, the pilot is relieved of the task of maneuvering a large plane to a dock or mooring buoy, particularly difficult in choppy seas and high winds.

The mooring of a seaplane in the movable berth is further simplified by the slip's bell-mouthed entrance and by a system of six water jets, three on each side of the entrance, which push the plane from one side of the slip to the other.

Rows of partially-inflated airplane tires, mounted horizontally along the two inner sides of the berth, prevent damage to the plane's fuselage by impact with the hard sides of the slip.

Cruiser Div-3 to U. S.

Tokyo—Cruiser Division No. 3, consisting of the USS Toledo, under command of Capt. H. E. Parker, USN; the USS Tucson, under Capt. D. F. McLean, USN; and the USS St. Paul, flagship of Rear Adm. E. E. Herrman, whose skipper is Capt. S. N. Leith, USN, left for the United States via Pearl Harbor 21 Oct.

Replacement will be made by Cruiser Division No. 15, which has arrived in Yokohama and includes the USS Duluth, flagship of Rear Adm. A. M. Bledsoe, USN, whose skipper is Capt. E. P. Hylant, USN, the USS Atlanta and the USS Topeka, under command of Rear Adm. J. H. Carson.

The returning Division, which served in Japanese waters since June, 1947, will carry Navy, military and civilian passengers back to the United States.

Adm. Fitch to Rubber Firm

Admiral Aubrey Wray Fitch, USN-Ref., has accepted a vice presidency with the General Tire & Rubber Export Co., at Akron, according to William O'Neil, president.

A former superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, Admiral Fitch retired from the Navy 1 July when he was special assistant to the then Under Secretary of the Navy, John Sullivan. Previous to his 1945 assignment as superintendent of the Academy, Adm. Fitch was Deputy Chief of Naval Operations.

Jet Fighter Unit

Maj. Marion E. Carl, Marine War Ace and holder of the world's speed record of 650.6 miles per hour is organizing the Leathernecks' first jet fighter squadron. Maj. Gen. Field Harris, Director of Marine Aviation, announced this week.

The squadron, expected to be the forerunner of several jet fighter units, will be gradually converted from Marine Corsair Squadron VMF-122 now at Cherry Point, N. C., the General said.

The evolution will be gradual, with present plans calling for 12 McDonnell FH-1 "Phantom" jets and 12 new F4U-5 "Corsairs" during the preliminary phases of adapting new air tactics to the subsonic fighter. FH-1 is the new official terminology for the FD-1, as the "Phantom" was formerly known.

Second Negro Naval Officer

Ensign Charles Teale, USN, is the second Negro male officer to be commissioned in the Regular Navy. A former enlisted man and V-12 student, Ensign Teale is the first Negro graduate of the new Navy Reserve Officer Training Corps program at Yale University.

Navy ROTC graduates are commissioned in the Regular Navy and immediately begin their obligatory service of two years' active duty. In keeping with this practice and in compliance with existing programs of integration, Ensign Teale has been assigned to duty aboard a light cruiser of the Pacific Fleet.

Gen. Vandegrift to Retire

Caribbean area where he participated in the bombardment, assault and capture of Coyotepe in Nicaragua. He later took part in the engagement and occupation of Vera Cruz, Mexico, and action against hostile Cacos bandits at Le Trou and Fort Capois, Haiti. After serving in various capacities both in the States and abroad he was promoted to Major General in March 1942 and became Commanding General of the First Marine Division.

On 7 Aug. 1942, General Vandegrift led the First Marine Division, Reinforced, in the first large-scale offensive action against the Japanese. For his outstanding services during this action, and the subsequent occupation and defense of Guadalcanal, he was awarded the Medal of Honor and the Navy Cross, and his First Marine Division, Reinforced, received a Presidential Unit Citation.

Promoted to Lieutenant General on 30 July 1943, he became Commanding General of the First Marine Amphibious Corps, which he commanded in the landing at Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville, Northern Solomon Islands, in November of that year. Upon establishing the beachhead, he relinquished command and returned to Marine Corps Headquarters, where he became Commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps. On 4 April 1945, he was appointed to the rank of General and, for his services as Commandant of the Marine Corps from January 1944 to June 1946, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

General Vandegrift, who reached the optional retirement age of sixty last March, continues to serve as Commandant of the Marine Corps, and resides with his wife, Mrs. Mildred Strode Vandegrift, at the Commandant's House, Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C.

Is this the CAPITAL WARSHIP of TOMORROW?

An Admiral of the Fleet said recently that the capital warship of tomorrow may well be the submarine. Atom powered subs that launch atomic rockets without surfacing are regarded as distinctly possible. Electric Boat is dedicated to helping keep the U. S. foremost in submarine development.

Gen. Stratemeyer Praises Navy

Addressing a Navy Day celebration at Norfolk, Va., Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, USAF, Commanding General of the Air Defense Command, stressed the importance of the Army-Navy-Air Force team to the security of the United States.

Speaking for the Air Force, General Stratemeyer told the members of the Norfolk Association of Commerce, that "We take great pride in honoring the 172d birthday of a team-mate which has always more than pulled its own weight."

He said:

"We airmen are deeply indebted to our Navy for its contribution to our efforts during the past war. I recall that while the preponderance of heavy bombers, the B-29's, B-17's and B-24's, together with long range fighters, were flown to forward areas, short range fighters and bombers made the sea voyages aboard Navy-escorted merchant vessels. In addition, the bulk of our equipment and supplies had to be transported thousands of ocean miles before effective maintenance at advanced bases could be realized. Our bombers and fighters would have stood by uselessly on the ground had not the necessary fuel, munitions, and spare parts been distributed by ocean transport. The Navy never failed. The United States Air Force is proud of the accomplishments of its long range B-29 bombers which brought the Japanese homeland under effective air attack, but we had to have bases, such as Guam, Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima, to make it possible. Joint task forces, spearheaded by combat escort carriers, provided these bases in the long flight along the 'road back' from the Gilberts to Okinawa. As we first heavily bombed, then moved forward from island to island, sea and air power steadily disposed of Japanese air and surface forces, while Marines and U. S. Infantrymen took these islands yard by yard. Then and only then, could we launch our B-29's against the Japanese homeland.

"Today, with war so advanced in its three dimensional phases of land, sea and air, the Navy's traditional role is even more vital than it was in the War of 1812. With Unification, the Navy has the inherent right to call on us for air transportation and air support—just as we have in our relatively short history, called upon the Navy for all-out support. We must be, one for all and all for one."

UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

Air Crews Win Trophy

Three crack crews from the Strategic Air Command's 43d Bombardment Group, (VH) Davis-Monthan Field, Tucson, Ariz., rang up first place in the 8th Air Force quarterly group competition held at Roswell airbase, Roswell, N. M., 9-10 Oct. They won the right to have their group's name engraved on the huge silver cup and a three month's possession of it.

An inspection team from headquarters, 8th Air Force, inspected Davis-Monthan field for its tactical, supply, administrative, and technical efficiency prior to the crew competition. The individual crews were graded on their knowledge and application of cruise control, radar, camera, and visual bombing, and bomb-run timing.

Crews from the Strategic Air Command's 4th Group at Ft. Worth, Texas, and the 509th Group at Roswell also competed.

Airplane commanders on the winning crews were Maj. Garth E. Doyle and Maj. Robert J. Leimbacher of the 65th Squadron and Maj. Karl L. Briel of the 63d Squadron. The 64th Squadron was not represented due to its being on maneuvers. Other crew members were:

USAF Triples Pilot Program

The United States Air Force announced this week that it will triple its pilot training program from the present 1,000 a year to 3,000 a year during 1948. The first 2,000 graduates furnished by the expansion will complete their training and be commissioned in 1949.

The accelerated pilot training program, the USAF said, is required in the 70-group program, and by mid-1948 the USAF will have 337,000 enlisted men, 64,000 officers, 55 fully-manned ready-to-flight groups and 15 skeletonized outfits capable of rapid expansion in the event of an emergency.

To get the 3,000 qualified men needed to fill flying classes at Randolph Field, Tex., next year, the USAF is streamlining aviation cadet procurement by eliminating costly psychomotor tests which had bottlenecked cadet recruiting during the last 12 months.

Designed to attract the best of the increasing number of two-year college men, the USAF's cadet recruiting program is being intensified to attract enough applicants to enable the Air Force to choose outstanding candidates for pilot's wings.

Replacing the difficult-to-administer psychomotor examinations, which measured an applicant's probable ability to absorb flight instruction, are intensified qualifying aptitude tests, a morals-and-character interview by a board of officers, and a rigid physical examination. The USAF said no flying safety precautions would be lost with the abandoned tests since they had not measured flying performance but had gauged learning capacity only. The complete aviation cadet tests now can be taken at any one of 55 major USAF bases throughout the country.

Commands Eighth AF Unit

Ft. Worth, Tex.—Maj. Alvin Starne Hascall has been designated Commanding Officer, 18th Communications Squadron and Asst. Staff Communications and Electronics officer, Eighth Air Force.

As head of the 18th Communications Sq. he will supervise the operation of telephone, teletype, radio and message center activities of the Eighth Air Force, part of the Strategic Air Command. He succeeded Maj. Elbert G. Sandoz, AC, who has been transferred to the newly activated 2d Bomb. Group, Davis-Monthan Field, Tucson, Ariz.

B-29 Record Official

The Strategic Air Command has been notified that The Federation Aeronautique Internationale has accepted both recent records made by Pecosan Dreamboat, B-29, and will list them as official. The records are:

1. Closed circuit distance record which is both world and international—8,854.308 miles was the distance flown. This was accomplished 1 to 3 Aug. 1947. It included two laps of a triangle from MacDill Field to a point near Benson, Ariz., to Andrews Field, Md. The flight started and ended at MacDill Field.

2. 10,000 kilometer closed course speed record. This is an international record. Speed was 273.195 miles per hour, accomplished 29 to 30 July 1947. The flight started and finished at Wright Field, and was made to a point near Benson, Ariz.

Air Adjutant General

pondence, and a document reference and research function.

Handling all fund raising campaigns for the USAF.

Maintaining the records and control of military and civilian manning authorizations for Headquarters USAF and preparing the Departmental civilian budget estimates.

Administering all military personnel assigned to Headquarters USAF.

Providing motion picture projection service, and maintaining a file of Air Force motion picture films and audio records at Headquarters USAF.

Providing photographic, photostatic, and under the supervision of the Director of Public Relations, still photo news coverage services for Headquarters USAF.

The establishment of the Department of the Air Force under the terms of the National Security Act of 1947 will require a vast amount of administrative detail to effect the transfer of various responsibilities and functions deemed essential to the administration of the Department. It may therefore be several months before the Air Adjutant General actually assumes responsibility for some of the functions described above or assumes complete responsibility for others.

For example, the transfer of the basic records of military personnel assigned to the USAF which are indispensable to the administration of such personnel involves: the segregation of the records of records of the Army; the screening of each file for non-essential papers; the incorporation and consolidation of related records; and finally the arrangement of the records and organization of the unit that will maintain them to effectively meet requirements for their use incident to the administration of USAF personnel. This, obviously, constitutes an operation of no small proportions.

The conduct of the Records Administration Program has been the responsibility of the Air Adjutant General since its inception. The improvement of record keeping practices, documentation policy and procedures, and the streamlining of all related paper work are objectives of the program which will receive much emphasis and attention in the immediate future.

Another responsibility of the Air Adjutant General which has swollen in size by the AAF's "departmentalization" is the review and revision of existing publications which will be required as a result of the assumption of various responsibilities by the Department of the Air Force. This formidable task will be undertaken in part and monitored as a whole by the Air Adjutant General.

In addition to the responsibilities and functions already enumerated, the Air Adjutant General will continue to perform those functions that have become "traditional" to adjutants general, such as: "trouble shooter", "father confessor", "expediter", "general source of information" and "advisor" in all administrative matters.

Chaplains Commission Meets
The semi-annual meeting of the General Commission on Chaplains of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America was held in Washington this week.

At a luncheon 29 Oct., Secretary of Defense Forrestal was the guest of honor and speaker. Speaking briefly, Secretary Forrestal referred to the appreciation in which the war chaplains were held, and of the "quality of chaplains provided irrespective of denomination." He commended the fact that in a time when there are so many "antis" "this gathering is not anti but for the spiritual welfare of the world." Continuing, the Secretary said "I am confident you may have a dim view of the world but you are aware of the ripples of influence that go out from you." "I assure you that you must keep your own faith. If we keep the things we have we must fight for them."

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Luther D. Miller, Chief of Army Chaplains, presented on behalf of the U. S. Army a certificate of appreciation for the work of the General Commission, which was received by Mr. Thomas A. Rymer, Director of the Chaplains' Commission.

Among distinguished personages present were the following:

Dr. Stewart M. Robinson, Vice Chairman of the General Commission; Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, General Secretary, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ; Lt. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Deputy Chief of Staff, U. S. Army; Vice Adm. William M. Fechteler, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Adm. Telfair Knight, Commandant, U. S. Maritime Service, Director, Training Division; Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Luther D. Miller, Chief of Chaplains, U. S. Army; Chaplain A. J. McKelway, Director, Chaplaincy Service, Veterans Administration; Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Director of Personnel and Adm., General Staff, U. S. Army; Bishop Charles W. Fillet, Vice Chairman of the General Commission; Adm. C. C. Hartman, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Operations; Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Chief, Public Information Division, Department of Army; Dr. Roy G. Ross, International Council of Religious Education; Gen. F. R. Kerr, Asst. Administrator for Special Services, Veterans Administration; Dr. Paul R. Hawley, Chief Medical Director, Veterans Administration; Chaplain John F. Hughes, Assistant Director of Chaplains Activity, Navy; Brig. Gen. John E. Upston, Director of Personnel, U. S. Air Force.

Dr. A. R. Bird, treasurer, presented the report on the current operating budget. Under the direction of Mr. Rymer the assets of the commission have been increased by approximately $165,000.00.

Local persons who planned and participated in the program are:

The Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, D.D., Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Washington; the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, D.D., rector of St. John's Church; Dr. William J. Lineback, representative of the Church of Christ (Disciples); Chaplain (Col.) Alfred C. Oliver, Jr., USA-Ret.; Chaplain Julian E. Yates, USA-Ret.; Dr. Arthur J. Todd, Christian Science Headquarters; Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, representative of the Congregational Christian Church; Dr. Charles L. Enders and Dr. Calvin H. Wingert, representatives of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and Dr. W. H. Jernagin, of the National Baptists of the U. S. A., and Dr. Andrew R. Bird, minister, Presbyterian Church of the Pilgrims.

Colonel Becomes M. Sgt.
From high-ranking officer to high-ranking noncom is the story of M. Sgt. Hamilton Merrill, who exchanged his eagles for the stripes and rockers of a master sergeant at Camp Stoneman, Calif., 20 Oct. Sgt. Merrill was sworn in by Capt. V. E. Wood of the Post Recruiting Office.

During the war Sgt. Merrill served as an Engineer officer in Hawaii until transferred to assume command of Christmas Island. He also made three invasions with the Marines, as beachmaster, in the Gilbert, Marshall, and Mariana Islands. Prior to his return to the U. S., he was Director of Port Operations in Tokyo. Sgt. Merrill plans to return to the base he once commanded as a colonel in Japan.

Dismisses Pedersen Rifle Suit

The Court of Claims has dismissed a suit charging infringement by the Government in its manufacture of the caliber .30, M1, (Garand) rifle, of the patents covering the Pedersen caliber .276 rifle.

In 1923, John D. Pedersen, for years previously a gun designer for Remington Arms, made a contract with the Ordnance Department under the terms of which he was to spend a year at Springfield Armory at a stipulated salary to develop a semiautomatic rifle for the United States Army. Out of his work there under this and further contracts, the last of which was made in January 1930, the Pedersen rifle was born. It was never adopted or approved for adoption by the Army. Instead, the Garand (M1) rifle, which had also been designed at Army Ordnance's Springfield Armory, was adopted.

Concluding paragraphs of that decision summarize the position taken by the Justices:

"We conclude that the Pedersen rifle was not adopted by the Army; that the M-1 or Garand rifle which was adopted was not the Pedersen rifle in appearance, structure, operation, or in any validly patented detail. It follows that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover either royalties under his contract, or compensation for the use of his patented inventions."

"We think that the evidence shows that the plaintiff designed and constructed an excellent rifle which probably would have been adopted by the Army if the Garand rifle had not appeared at about the same time and seemed preferable to the Army. But since it did seem to the Army to be a preferable weapon, it was the duty of the Army, and no violation of the plaintiff's rights, to adopt and use it.

Inspection Duty Repeal Asked

The Department of the Army will ask the next session of Congress to repeal Section 1 of the Act of 20 April, 1874, which requires frequent inquiries to be made by Inspectors General as to the necessity, economy and propriety of all disbursements made by disbursing officers of the Army, and as to whether they comply with the law in keeping their accounts and making deposits.

Secretary of the Army Royall has stated that at the time of the enactment of this law all departments of the Army had their own disbursing officers who made purchases and paid for them. As the size of the Army was limited to 25,000 enlisted men, and the appropriation for the Army amounted to $27,500,000 for the fiscal year 1875, "the officers of the Inspection Department of the Army could comply literally with the requirements of the Act," but these requirements are "impracticable of literal or even substantial compliance at this time."

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1947

"If the United States can remain at peace until the United Nations is sufficiently strong to demonstrate the ability to keep the peace, the world can remain at peace."
—GENERAL JACOB L. DEVERS.

THE President's determination that there shall be a new dress uniform for officers of the Armed Forces, which will be a required article of apparel, sharpens the need for substantial upward revision of the Service pay scales. Army officers recall that before World War II when the dress and the full evening dress were required, these uniforms cost upwards of $300. At present day prices the cost to the individual officers probably will be twice that figure, thus placing an additional heavy burden on the already over-laden budgets of service personnel. Officer pay tables have changed but little since 1908 and yet in the past nine years alone the price of food has increased 93 per cent and clothing about 84 per cent. Despite popular belief commissary purchases do not represent any appreciable economies for service personnel, for their prices are substantially the same as those in the chain stores of civilians. As to clothing, officers are under a double burden, for they must possess not only a complete uniform outfit but civilian clothing as well. Constant travel and frequent change of stations are costly because the government's reimbursement rarely equals actual expenditure, while frequent moving of household goods inevitably results in wear and loss not incurred by those whose homes are rooted. Because of the uncertainty and penuriousness of pensions for their dependents, and the great reduction in income they suffer when they pass to the retired list, officers must set aside some funds for the future. The income tax, both Federal and State, takes another slice out of their pay—and that will be even higher after next year when active officers will lose their small military exemption and be subject to the full force of the tax just as retired officers, unfortunately, are now. The Joint pay study, recently completed under the chairmanship of Admiral Fechteler, explores all these factors and recommends substantial increases to meet the higher costs of living as well as to partly meet the increased standards of living which recent years have brought to virtually all classes of civilian workers. This report is now before the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force for comment and possible approval. We urge these Secretaries to speed the report together with any improvements they may suggest, back to the Joint Board so that the final draft may go to Secretary of Defense Forrestal in time for submission to the special session of Congress which has been called for 17 November. Admiral Fechteler's board has all the necessary data so that long Congressional hearings would not be needed and, with proper support and adequate understanding of the problem in Congress, early enactment could be had.

THE findings of the House subcommittee under the chairmanship of Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.) on the conduct and treatment of our forces in Europe and the Near East should put at rest now and in the immediate future any adverse criticism of the operations of our Army, Navy, or Air Forces abroad. Congressmen are not reluctant to voice criticism where they feel it is due. Mr. Short's committee was composed of both Republicans and Democrats all of whom, through their service on the House Committee on Armed Services and their prior work on the older Military and Naval Committees of the House, have a thorough knowledge of the operation of the Armed Forces and of the varied criticisms and charges that have been made against the Services to Congress as well as through the public press. To help in their task of building and maintaining a strong National Defense they wanted to know about any shortcomings so that they could take legislative steps to overcome them. They knew what to look for and how to ferret out the facts. They sought and were given the opportunity to talk privately and freely with officers and enlisted men. And yet they reported that they "found the morale of our troops to be exceptionally high," the leadership of commissioned and non-commissioned officers "outstanding," health "excellent," and discipline of the "highest quality." From hundreds of soldiers personally interviewed they received only "minor complaints, some of which were found to be justified," but "remedial steps were immediately taken by local commanders." In a nutshell, the report, the full text of which is published elsewhere in this issue, they discovered that through hard work and skillful professional training our Regular Establishments have molded the high school youths that have volunteered for service into efficient and contented soldiers, sailors, and airmen who have won for their Forces the respect of all with whom they have been thrown in contact. This reflects the sentiments of General Lucius Clay who in an address at the National Press Club, during his recent visit to Washington, was asked what could be done to improve the morale and efficiency of the officers and enlisted men in Europe. His reply was that that question better not be put to the men over there, for every one of them was proud and certain that he belonged to the best Army in the world. That high morale and confident efficiency is reflected in the report of Mr. Short's committee. In turn it will be reflected in the legislative program of the next session for the Committee's report concluded with the statement that "conditions throughout the world make it imperative that the United States be strong on land, sea, and air."

Can't Be Done

A school teacher one day, during the drawing hour, suggested that each pupil draw what he or she would like to be when grown up. At the end of the lesson one little girl turned in a blank piece of paper.

"Why," said the teacher, "Isn't there anything you would like to be when you grow up?"

"Yes," said the little girl, "I would like to be married, but I don't know how to draw it."

—Brookley Field Wolfarer.

Slight Error

A man who had imbibed too freely pondered the ways of concealing his condition from his wife. "I'll go home and read," he decided. "Whoever heard of a drunken man reading a book?"

Later his wife heard a noise in the library. "What in the world are you doing in there?"

"Reading, my dear," he replied cheerfully.

"You idiot," she said as she looked in at the library door, "shut up that valise and come to bed."

Too Bad

"Is this the laundry? Well, you sent me a half a dozen very old handkerchiefs instead of my shirt."

"Them ain't handkerchiefs. That is your shirt."

Viewpoint

The sailor was relating his hair-raising experiences aboard a torpedoed ship. The dear little lady was listening wide-eyed.
"And there I saw a torpedo, lady, heading straight for our ship," he went on.
"Oh, dear," she gasped, "I do hope it was one of ours!"

W. M. C.—The Adjutant General's Office has advised us that neither the Scabbard and Blade Ribbon or the "Allied Colors" Ribbon is authorized by the War Department. The ORC ribbon may not be worn by a soldier who is no longer a member of the ORC; it was stated.

J. D. C.—Regulations concerning the number of hours and period of time necessary for the rating of a senior pilot have not been changed since July 1946 according to the War Department. Time now required is ten years' active service and 2,000 hours flying time.

H. W. L.—WD Circular 183, 1947 merely puts into published form the War Department policy resulting from the Comptroller Decision to which you refer. You would not now be authorized a refund of the enlistment allowance which it was necessary for you to return at the time of your retirement.

The Treasury Department has received dispatches from the steamer Lincoln, sent to the waters of the new territory (Alaska). Three attempts were made to take observations to fix accurately the boundaries between British Columbia and our new territory, which were, however, unsuccessful, on account of rain and fog. After the fog cleared away the steamer entered the port (Sitka) and the officers and men received a cordial reception from Russian officials. The officers expressed themselves already satisfied that the resources of the country in timber and fish-eries have not been overrated.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The manner in which the question of outlying and strategic bases has dropped from public view suggests that a change of emphasis has occurred at security planning levels.

In sharp contrast to the situation which existed a year ago, when public excitement was high on such questions as U. S. trusteeship over the Pacific islands formerly mandated to the Japanese, American proposals for base rights in Panama, and a permanent footing in the Azores, the question of bases now gets little public attention.

The trusteeship over the mandated islands now exists. The requirements presented to Panama have been scaled down to a mere fraction of the original proposal. The Azores question is at rest with American possession of civilian air landing rights. The only "base area" to break into the news reports in recent weeks has been Greenland-Iceland.

Technically, Greenland lies within the Western Hemisphere defense zone defined by the Inter-American Defense Pact of Rio de Janeiro, Iceland outside that zone. Greenland is Danish territory, Iceland sovereign. Both are critical in any security system for the United States, and the public criticism by officials of the Danish Foreign Ministry of any continuation of American privileges in Greenland, particularly, can only be the result of Russian pressure, stemming from the fact that the Soviet government is quite as aware as the American government of the key strategic value of that Arctic subcontinent. The continuing air transport rights in Iceland are under fire in the Icelandic parliament. In both cases, the military problem of this country would seem to be less a matter of permanent bases there, than the certainty of getting there first in the event of war.

The United States is unlikely to relinquish any bases to which it has established a clear right by virtue of lease, treaty, trusteeship or sovereignty, but the whole treatment of the base question has altered radically nonetheless. The Pacific islands have lost importance, not just temporarily because the U. S. occupies Japan, but because the only power likely to be capable of mounting a war against the U. S. in the foreseeable future—that is to say, Russia—faces the North, not the South or Central, Pacific. Moreover, Siberia and even Manchuria are incapable logistically of supporting a Pacific offensive.

This explains why, for instance, the U. S., which a year ago was quite interested in Manus Island in the Admiralties, no longer has the slightest concern with base rights there. It explains why ambitious proposals for Army and Air Force bases in the Philippines have been whittled down to eventual maintenance of a token force of probably no more than 5,000 men concentrated at Clark Field and Fort Stotsenburg. Their mission? A training cadre for the Philippine forces, and formal implementation of this country's guarantee of Philippine independence and sovereignty. Moreover, in this case, instead of the Philippines granting an American request for bases, the United States grants a Philippine request for such a token garrison.

Again, the plans involving Latin America reflect a strategic purpose to keep the bulk of American armed strength within the United States, prepared to establish strategic bases quickly—as, for instance, in the Saudi Arabia oilfields—but not scattered into defense garrisons along a string of outlying bastions. Bases built and used by the United States in South America during the war have been turned over to the respective South American governments, and plans for Panama have been scaled down drastically. This reduction of emphasis can be attributed partly to reliance on Inter-American defense schemes, but chiefly to a belief the only possible enemy cannot threaten from that direction.

The string of bases from Newfoundland to British Guiana, obtained from Britain on 99-year lease in exchange for overage destroyers; the old-line bases such as Puerto Rico, Guantanamo, and the Canal Zone itself—these are maintained and manned, but on a scale far below wartime levels, and in the cases of some leased areas on little more than caretaker status. Hawaii, Samoa and Guam of course are being maintained, and the latter strengthened. The Aleutians and Alaska figure more heavily in the long-range thinking, as does the Canadian far north, where experimental work is being carried out by joint American-Canadian effort. As to Alaska, while it is being developed, there is a theory that Russia would find it logistically difficult, now or at any time in the predictable future, to sustain a major offensive based on eastern Siberia. Views on the significance of the far north are currently modified by the belief that effective trans-polar operations are as distant as "push-button" warfare.

For the present at least the outlying bases considered highly important are the occupied territories of Germany and the Japanese mainland. Failing these, Great Britain and the Azores, in which permanent bases are impossible or unlikely, respectively, become the bastions on the Atlantic side; Okinawa the essential outpost in the Pacific. The latter is not included in the United Nations trusteeship, but is included in Japanese home territory and remains to be treated, either by disposal in the peace treaty with Japan, or in direct negotiations with a Japanese government after a treaty is signed.

The critical area, then, whether this country keeps its bases there or not, is north-eastward and eastward—Newfoundland, Greenland, Iceland, the Azores. Of all these, only the base in Newfoundland is covered by 99-year lease, and the question of continuing that lease may be raised if Newfoundland ends its colonial status and becomes either a province of Canada or a Dominion. In any case, the rights held necessary to this country's security fall outside any question of United Nations control and debate, and are subject only to bilateral diplomatic negotiations between the United States and the states involved.

There is no longer any doubt concerning the passage of emergency appropriations for European relief. There will, too, be an increase in the funds for our occupation. However, on the question of the full adoption of the over-all Marshall Plan for European recovery will be marked by prolonged discussion and debate probably extending through the special session and over into the next regular session of Congress.

"National Defense" Building—Despite the apparently well authenticated rumors, the building which has gained great fame as the "Pentagon" will not be renamed the "National Defense Building," according to assurance given by officials at the Department of the Army which has control of the structure. Since Secretary of Defense Forrestal moved his office and his immediate staff into the Pentagon, which houses the main offices of the Department of the Army and the Department of the Air Force, there has been a general acceptance of gossip that the building would henceforth be called the "National Defense Building." These rumors have been strengthened by the fact that the telephone operators have been instructed to greet callers with the phrase "National Defense," instead of the old "War Department" and because the road signs leading to it have been changed to read "National Defense." This is explained by the statement that because Mr. Forrestal and his staff are now there, the "Department of the Army" would be too narrow a designation, but "Pentagon" as an overall name will remain. The only other official change has been to take down the sign which once hung over the top side restaurant—"General Officers Dining Room"—and put up a new one reading "General and Flag Officers Dining Room."

As a matter of fact, there is no sanction in the law for the use of "National Defense" as a term for the new organization. While there is a general tendency to refer to the new "Department of National Defense," there is no such thing. The new law sets up three departments coordinated through the "National Military Establishment," under a single "Secretary of Defense."

Judge Advocate General's Department—In a recent letter from Germany, Judge Daniel T. O'Connell of Boston and now a Judge, Military Tribunal 1, Nurnberg, writes of having seen Lt. Col. B. F. Ellis, Army War Crimes Group, Augsburg, Germany and Col. J. L. Harbaugh, Theater Judge Advocate, European Command. Judge O'Connell, after observing the trials at Dachau, and drawing upon his many years of legal experience writes that he is led "to the conclusion that the administration of the proceedings compel admiration and commendation."

Inaugurating a program of inspection at the several law schools where officers are enrolled under the auspices of this department, Maj. Gen. Thos. H. Green on 23 Oct. visited the following officers at Harvard Law School: Col. Geo. W. Hickman, Lt. Col. Clifford F. Cordes, Lt. Col. Edward H. Kurth, Lt. Col. Charles D. T. Lennhoff and Maj. Lee B. Ledford, Jr.

Col. Claude B. Mickelwait, Assistant Judge Advocate General, visited Maj. Julian E. Weischler, Assistant Staff Judge Advocate of the V Corps, and Capt. Harry B. Sames, Staff Judge Advocate of the 82nd Airborne Division on 23 Oct. at Ft. Bragg, N. C. Col. Mickelwait then proceeded to Raleigh, N. C., where he was speaker at a luncheon given in conjunction with the N. C. Bar Association convention by a group of former judge advocates.

The first meeting of the 137th Judge Advocate General's Reserve Composite Group of New York City will be held on 10 Nov. at the Harvard Club. Col. Arthur Levitt is commander of the group and hopes to have Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Green, the Judge Advocate General, present for the first meeting.

A dinner in tribute to Brig. Gen. Ralph G. Boyd was held at the Harvard Club, Boston, Mass., on Oct. 22. The dinner was well attended by a group of former Judge Advocates Col. Sumner W. Elton, Asst. Atty. Gen. for the State of Massachusetts, presided.

The Judge Advocate Chapter, District of Columbia Department, Reserve Officers' Association, held a meeting at the Continental Hotel, Washington, D. C., on 27 Oct. Maj. R. H. Love, President, presided.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Comdr. Earle E. Metcalfe (MC), USN, was recently awarded the Bronze Star Medal by the President of the United States. The award was presented by Rear Adm. T. C. Anderson (MC), USN, Medical Officer in Command, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., at a ceremony held at the Medical Center. The citation reads: "For meritorious service as Senior Medical Officer of the USS Yorktown, in action against enemy Japanese forces on the Japanese Homeland and adjacent islands, from May 15 to August 15, 1945. Serving with distinction in an important position during a period of intense combat operations, Commander (then Lieutenant Commander) Metcalfe maintained his department at a high peak of efficiency and was in large measure responsible for the outstanding record achieved by his ship in the safe recovery of the sick and wounded. MRS. Lucius D. Clay who accompanied her husband, General Clay, Commanding General, European Command, to the States, returned with him to the American occupied zone overseas, to continue the fine work she has inaugurated among other women in that area.

In 1946 she inaugurated the American Women's Club of Berlin, through whose channels undernourished children with polio and tuberculosis have benefited. English is being taught, German youths are being kept off the streets by boys' clubs, and pathetic little children who know not their names or their nationalities are gathered into the fold of the refugees provided by the sympathetic women, who have established clubs in all American-occupied areas. The Berlin membership now numbers 300 with Mrs. Fred Devereux, wife of a civilian in the military government, as its president. Mrs. Clay has said: "This is the most interesting thing that ever happened to me." She hopes for volunteers in aiding the cause on this side of the sea.

The Judge Advocate General's Department will entertain with a dinner and dance at the Army War College on Friday evening, 21 Nov. It is expected that the dinner will be largely attended by members of the JAGD not only from Washington but from stations in adjoining states.

Financial Digest

The national summary of business conditions prepared by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and based upon statistics for September and the first half of October shows that industrial output and employment expanded somewhat further in September. Value of retail trade increased, reflecting partly a further rise in prices. In the early part of October department store sales declined.

Output of manufactured products and minerals showed some further rise in September, and the Board's seasonally adjusted index of industrial production advanced three points to 185 per cent of the 1935-39 average. This was the same as the May index.

Activity in durable goods industries as a group increased further in September owing mainly to larger output of steel and of most types of machinery and transportation equipment. Steel output was temporarily curtailed around the middle of the month as a result of an industrial dispute, but advanced sharply in the latter part of the month and continued to rise in October, reaching a scheduled rate of 97 per cent of capacity.

The Board's index of nondurable goods output showed a slight increase in September, reflecting mainly increased production of rayon textiles, paperboard, and petroleum products. Minerals production rose further in September, reflecting a new record rate of crude petroleum output and a substantial gain in coal production.

Nonagricultural employment increased by 450,000 persons in September, and was at the record level of 43 million, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics figures.

The value of new construction activity on projects under way, as estimated by the Departments of Commerce and Labor, increased somewhat further in September.

Merchant Marine

Port statistics show a slight decline in New York port traffic over the past 30 days. On 22 Oct. there were 304 vessels in the port as compared with 323 on the same day in September. This shows a continuation of the gradual decline since the wartime peak, when over 400 ships were being worked, repaired or at anchor in New York each day.

The Navy Department last week offered eight more vessels for sale, including five destroyer escorts, one minesweeper and two destroyers. The destroyer escorts are the Sederstrom, Fleming, Tisdale, Eisele and Manlove, all built in 1943 and presently at Seattle, Wash. Bids will be opened at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, 24 Nov.

Lloyd's Register of Shipping states that although world merchant shipbuilding under construction in the third quarter of 1947 increased there is a continuance of a decline in the output of United States shipyards. According to the Register the United Kingdom was building 53.2 per cent of all new tonnage, compared to the 4.5 per cent being produced by the United States. The world total now on the ways is 3,968,893 gross tons.

The Department of Commerce last week released its annual trade statistics volume entitled "Foreign Commerce and Navigation of the United States for the Calendar Year 1944, Volume II—Export Transport Statistics." Including 588 pages of tables and data regarding American exports, the volume is priced at $3.50 and is for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

American merchant seamen who served at least 30 days aboard American merchant ships during the war may receive, upon written application, a Maritime Commission U. S. Merchant Marine Victory Medal. Applications should be addressed to Capt. Frank Rusk, chief of the Merchant Marine Medals Section, Maritime Commission.

Seeks Uniform Service Dress

the cape is optional. The cape lining conforms to the color of the arm, branch or service of the wearer.

The Navy evening dress is somewhat similar but differs in enough points to make it stand out in a gathering including Army and Air Force officers. Marine Corps dress is traditional and differs greatly from the other two.

Marine Corps Study

A Marine Corps uniform traditional since 1832, the officers' evening-dress (or "mess dress" as it is sometimes called) may go under the block if projects now under consideration by the Marine Corps Uniform Board are approved.

The Marine evening dress—not to be confused with the well-known dress blues—is worn for formal occasions as an equivalent to civilian white-tie-and-tails, and during the past war was of course rarely seen, inasmuch as temporary or reserve officers were not required to possess it. As a result, few Marine officers below field grade now are familiar with this uniform.

Wholly distinctive and differing from the semi-civilian cut evening dress of Army, Navy and Air Forces, the Marine uniform consists of a tailless mess-jacket coat, a gold standing-collar and gold shoulder-knots. Trousers are dark blue, with scarlet and gold striping. The uniform has now been worn in substantially this form for more than a century.

Proposals before the Marine Uniform Board vary from redesign of a replacement evening dress along the lines of Army and Navy uniforms now similarly prescribed, to adoption of a full-dress modification whereby gold shoulder-knots would be imposed upon the present dress blues. It is not known whether or not the Marine officers' boat-cloke with its traditional scarlet lining is likewise doomed under present plans.

The present situation is reminiscent of one which arose in 1937 when certain senior officers at Marine Corps Headquarters attempted to convince General Thomas Holcomb, then Major General

Commandant, to adopt a revised dress blue uniform minus the standing collar which, both in blues and in the uniform now awaiting abandonment, has long been the trademark of Marine dress clothing. At that time, General Holcomb stated that he was unwilling to carry out such a radical change without an indication of the views of all Marine officers on the subject. As a result, all officers were circularized by Marine Corps Headquarters, and, in the ensuing poll, results very heavily favored the traditional uniform. Information is not available as to whether General Vandegrift contemplates similar action, inasmuch as the majority of Marine officers are unfamiliar with the evening dress as it now stands and therefore could not vote with full knowledge and experience upon the question, even though they would eventually in any case be required to procure evening dress uniforms of one type or the other.

USNA Housing Development

The new Homojia Housing development for enlisted personnel and their families of the Severn River Naval Command was formally opened at 11:00 o'clock, 28 Oct., by Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, Jr., Commandant of the Command and Superintendent of the Naval Academy.

The program opened with an invocation by Chaplain Richard H. Huff, followed by an address by Admiral Holloway and one by Capt. Wallis F. Petersen, Commanding Officer of the U. S. Naval Station, Annapolis. The ceremonies closed with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the U. S. Naval Academy Band.

Among those present for the ceremonies were Capt. Jesse R. Wallace, Chief of Staff; Capt. Thomas K. Wright, Commanding Officer, Naval Air Activities; Comdr. Robert S. Riddell, Commanding Officer, Naval Air Facility; Comdr. Donald I. Thomas, Executive Officer of the Naval Station; Comdr. Byron L. Gurnette, Flag Lt., and Aide to the Supt.; and Lt. Comdr. Harvey J. Smith, Commanding Officer of the Small Craft Facility.

Mobilization Plans

Former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson charged last weekend before the Senate War Investigating Committee that delays in developing our industrial mobilization plans prior to World War II were attributable to the then Secretary of Commerce Frances Perkins, Secretary of War Woodring, and General Brehon Somervell.

Mr. Johnson, whose tour as assistant secretary was marked by frequent clashes with his official associates, told the committee that if he and the then Secretary of the Navy Edison "had been left alone in this picture we would have had the Army and Navy together on a much more complete basis than it is now."

New Competitive Tour Policy

Eligibility requirements for competitive tours of active duty leading to appointment in the Regular Army and the Regular Air Force have been broadened by the two services. The tours, as before, are open to Reserve, National Guard and Army of the United States officers.

The new policy permits officers who are high school graduates but who do not have two years of college to take an Educational Development test to establish eligibility in lieu of the college education previously required.

The next competitive tour of active duty starts, 15 Jan. 1948. Officers may be up to 27 years of age except medical, dental, veterinary and Judge Advocate General officers who may be 32 years of age, chaplains who may be 34 and Medical Service Corps candidates who may be 30.

The deadline for applications is 30 Nov. 1947. More than 400 vacancies in the Regular establishment can be filled from those entering the tour commencing in January. Officers on active duty should submit application to The Adjutant General through their commanding officer, and officers not on active duty apply direct to The Adjutant General.
